

PhD Milka Đukić, associate professor

Faculty of Sport, University “Union-Nikola Tesla”, Belgrade, Serbia

MSc Bojana Ostojić

Faculty of Sport, University “Union-Nikola Tesla”, Belgrade, Serbia

MSc Milica Đukić

Faculty of Physical Education, University of Novi Sad, Serbia

MA Borka Malčić

Faculty of Philosophy, University of Novi Sad, Serbia

Discrimination Against Women in Sports Journalism

Abstract: Each society uses gender as one of the standards for the description of the genus, but there are no two cultures that could be unanimously agree on what the different genera. For example, the division of labor between the sexes is best defined by gender, but considering that the reproduction based on the general biological difference between women and men, society are using this as a basis for the allocation of other tasks. Study of various cultures show that tasks and job specialization are not strictly conditioned pole individuals and not strictly tied to a pole, but a cultural characteristic. Also, the race is changing the culture of the time, which is not fixed in nature, but rather evolves. With the development of society, functions that take men and women are no longer determined solely by culture, but also social, political and economic factors. In this paper we deal with discrimination against women in sports journalism, and to the conclusion we came trough the interview, the collection and processing of data in the field.

Keywords: gender, discrimination, women, sports journalism